

WOMEN REFUGEES IN STRICKEN BELGIUM.

Could anything better show the horrors of war? With their husbands killed these aged sisters and the daughter of one of them took what belongings they had saved and started on a search for another home.

FIGHTING IN THE STREETS OF ALOST.

This picture was made by a moving picture machine operator as men were falling in front of him while firing from behind a street barricade. A few moments later the photographer hurried away to save his precious film.

BELGIAN REFUGEES ON THE ROAD.

Residents of scores of towns and villages in Belgium have been forced to flee with such of their belongings as they could carry when the Germans advanced. At times the roads were lined for miles with men, women and children.

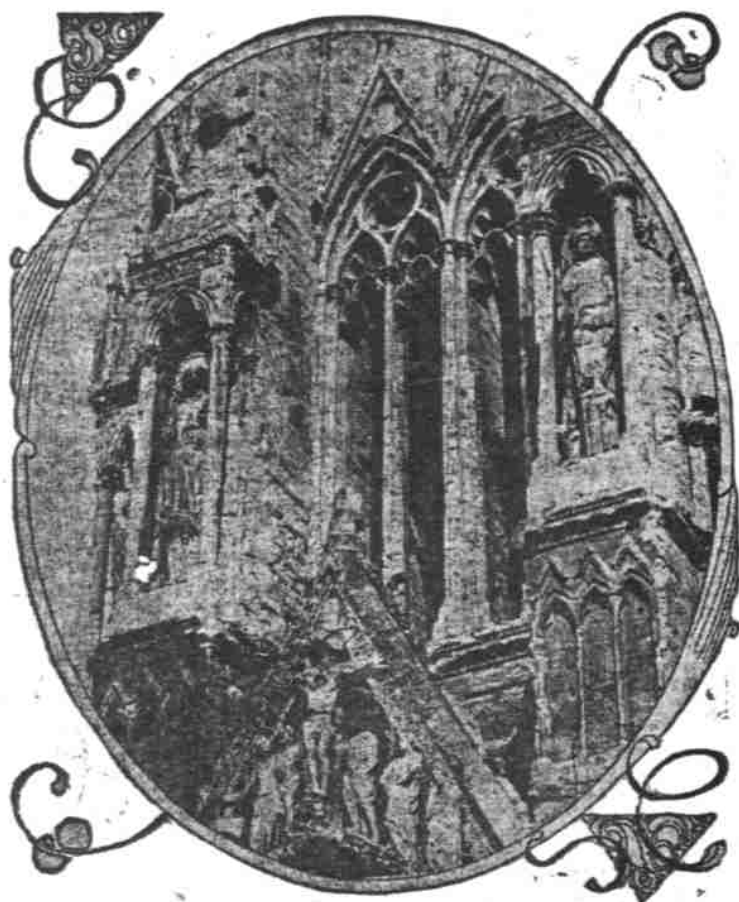

RUSSIAN ARMY OFFICERS IN GALICIA.

Photo by American Press Association.

Many of the officers serving in the czar's fighting force are of foreign parentage. Most of those shown here are Scots. At the right is Colonel Gillivray, and next to him is Colonel Robertson.

RUINS OF THE RHEIMS CATHEDRAL.

View of one wall of the edifice after the bombardment.

REMOVING DEAD FROM BATTLEFIELD.

This photograph was made just after the battle of Mons.

CARRIER PIGEONS IN WARFARE.

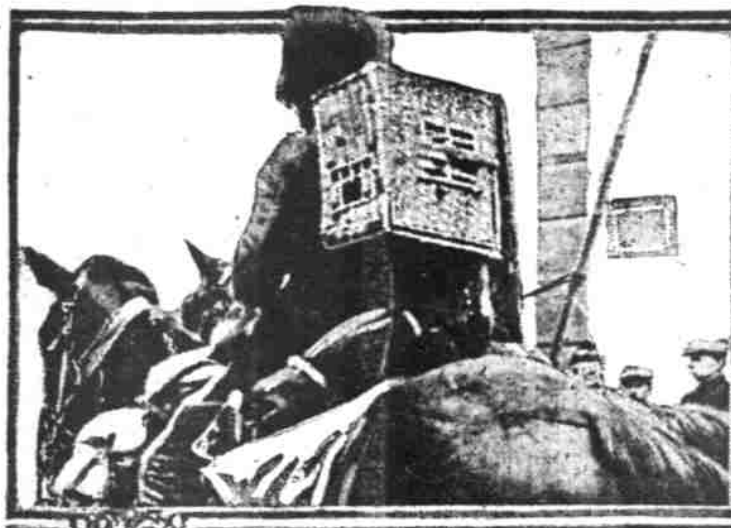

Photo by American Press Association.

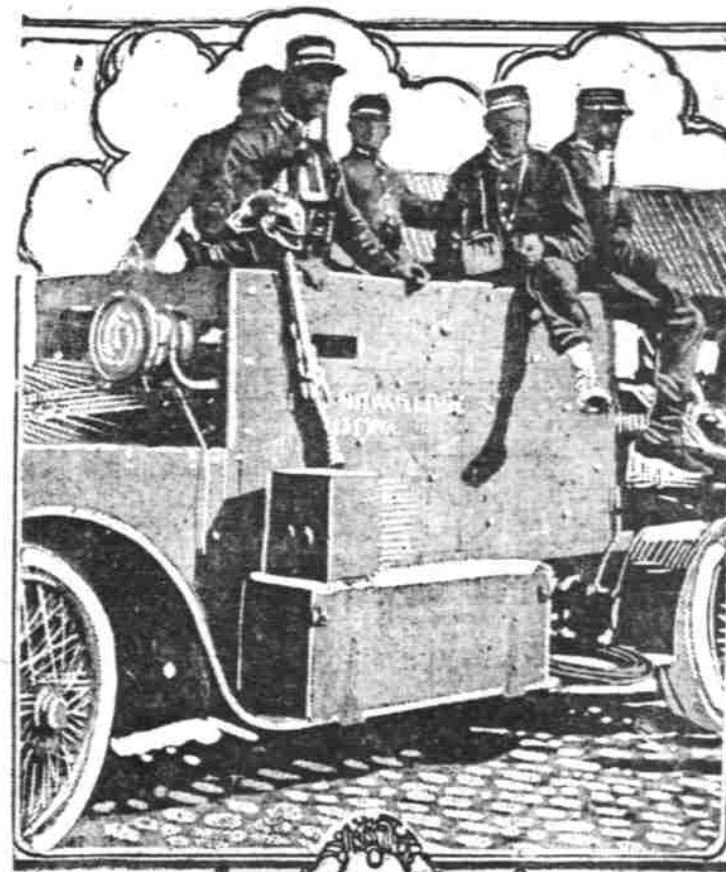

The Belgian soldiers carry carrier pigeons with them, transporting them in cages on the backs of cavalrymen.

CHAPLAIN IN THE BELGIAN ARMY.

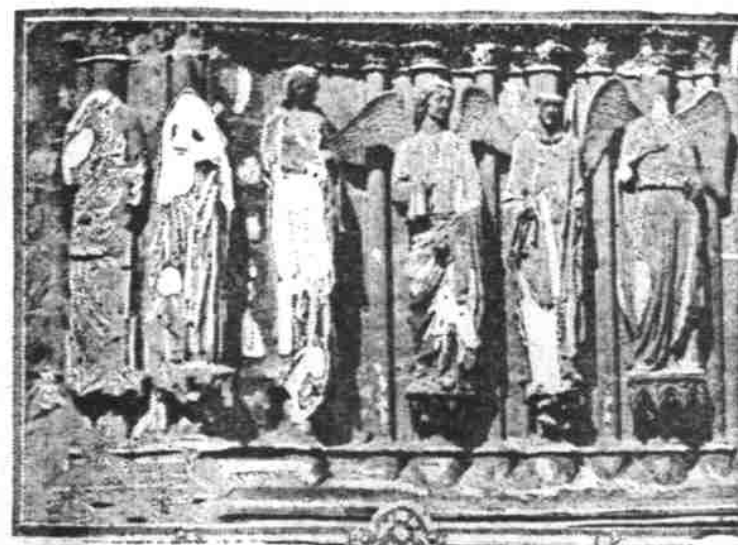

Photo by American Press Association.

ARMORED AUTO USED BY THE FRENCH.

DAMAGE DONE TO RHEIMS CATHEDRAL.

This shows merely a small section of the outer wall on which the damage done to the statues by the German shells is plainly seen.